

Games in Teaching English

It is well-known that speech makes up only a fraction of human communication, therefore it is clear that our communication is nonverbal.

Facial expressions, hand gestures and body language are essential elements of how we communicate.

Why should a teacher use games?

The main reason would be because these activities have a great educational value and they can be used in the classroom to make learners develop their speaking abilities, use the language instead of just thinking about learning the correct forms.

Last but not least, they make lessons very entertaining because they offer students a fun-filled and relaxing learning atmosphere.

Secondly, games encourage learners to interact, cooperate, to be creative and spontaneous in using the language in a meaningful way.

Learners want to take part in activities, to play games and are generally quite competitive. To take part in games, they must be able to understand and communicate in the target language.

Moreover, games also encourage learners to keep interested in the work and a teacher can use them to create contexts in which the language is useful.

It is also known that students learn through experimenting, discovering and interacting with their environment so they continuously need variation to increase their motivation.

By using games, students already have a context in which the use of the target language is immediately useful.

This learning situation is similar to how mother tongue speakers would learn without being aware they are studying.

Games are a welcome break from the usual routine of the language class, they are learner-centred, they reduce learning anxiety, they are motivating and challenging, they integrate various linguistic skills, they provide language practice in the various skills – speaking, writing, listening and reading – they encourage creative and spontaneous use of language.

Games could be used any time because they must be more than just fun, they should involve "friendly" competition and keep all the students involved and interested.

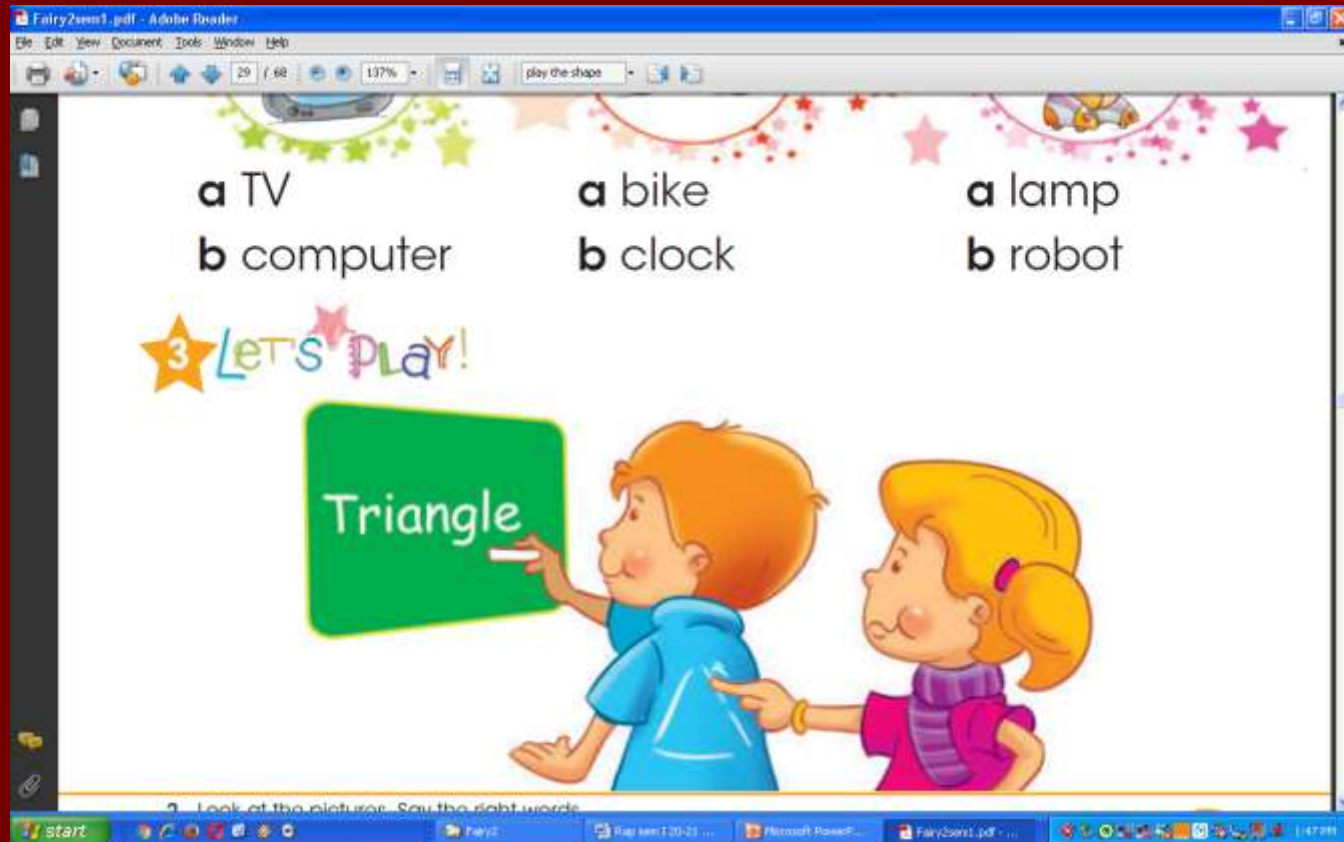

Games give students a chance to learn, practice, or review specific language material.

Teachers must choose suitable activities (depending on the number of students, proficiency level, cultural context, timing, learning topic, and the classroom settings) and give clear instructions, clear rules and clear time limits.

Such examples of games could be found in many of the textbooks that we use in teaching English.

First, some examples from the textbooks Fairyland 2, Booklet 3 and 4 (for the 5th-8th graders, most textbooks do not include games):

The image is a screenshot of a PDF document titled 'Fairy2zem2.pdf' opened in Adobe Reader. The document content is a memory game page. At the top, there are three columns of clothing items with labels: 'a T-shirt', 'a hat', 'a shoes' in the first row, and 'b jumper', 'b cap', 'b vest' in the second row. Below this is a star-shaped icon with the number '3' and the text 'Let's play!'. The main illustration shows a girl and a boy looking at clothes hanging on a line. The girl says 'It's red.' and the boy says 'A T-shirt!'. At the bottom of the page, there is an instruction: '2 Look, read and choose the right words.' The screenshot also shows the Adobe Reader interface with a search bar containing 'memory' and a Windows taskbar at the bottom with the Start button and several open applications.

4) Next, there are the British Council game resources to be found at <https://learnenglishkids.britishcouncil.org/fun-games>, where teachers or students can choose the topic they want to play a game for in alphabetical order A-Z.

The screenshot shows a web browser window displaying the 'Games' section of the British Council LearnEnglish Kids website. The browser's address bar shows the URL <https://learnenglishkids.britishcouncil.org/games>. The website header includes the 'LearnEnglish Kids' logo and a search icon. The main content area features a large blue monster character and the heading 'Games'. Below this, a navigation bar lists categories: ALL, A, C, F, J, M, S, T, W. A grid of 15 game tiles is displayed, each with a play button icon and a title: 'ABC countdown', 'Animal band quiz', 'Clean and green', 'Fantasy Run', 'Job mixer', 'Magic monkey', 'School Run', 'Secret coder', 'Story Maker 1', 'Story Maker 2', 'Style-a-hero', 'Teddy Dresser', and 'Wordshaka'. To the right of the grid, there are three promotional banners: 'Are you looking for an English course?' with an image of a teacher and students, 'LearnEnglish Kids: Playtime' with an image of a child using a tablet, and 'Help and Support' with a list of links: 'Covid-19 support for parents', 'Getting started for kids', and 'Have a nice day for kids'. The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the 'start' button, several open applications, and the system clock displaying 3:05 PM.
